Diatonic Flute (by Royal Letters Patent)

This instrument has now been four years before the public, and is pronounced by the most eminent Professors and Amateurs of distinction, who have adopted it, to be unrivalled for brilliancy of tone and correctness of tune. Although entirely new in its construction, it retains the old system of fingering, with several additional ones, which greatly facilitate the execution of passages that cannot be produced on the old Flute. A perfect succession of harmonic notes may be executed with the utmost ease, and the four middle C's are in perfect tune. It is played by Mr. Richardson and several other Professors in London; by Mr. Nicholson, Leicester; Mr. Percival, Liverpool; Mr. Powell, Dublin; Mr. Creed Ragal, Manchester; Mr. Sykes, Leeds; &c. Mr. Pratten is now performing solos on this Flute, at M. Jullien's Concerts. Descriptions and testimonials forwarded free. Manufactory, 135, Fleet-street. A. SICCAM, Patentee.

Large Folio—80 pages. Reduced price, 7s. 6d.

Warren's Chanter's Hand-Guide.

375 Chants, in 34 books, two-pence each. London: R. Cocks & Co. "This very useful and complete publication is now brought to a close, and Mr. Warren has achieved his task in so creditable a manner as to prove himself to be a musician of great capabilities, and one exceedingly well versed in those compositions which are peculiarly well adapted to the service of the church. The psalms are noted throughout to show how they should be accurately sung. No cathedral library will be complete without several duplicate volumes of this work for daily use, and it may also be introduced into parochial choirs with great advantage. The price at which it is published will also ensure for it a large amount of patronage."—Vide Bell's Weekly Messenger, April 13th. London: R. Cocks & Co., New Burlington-street.
